

ONE TAP. THE REVIEW IS WRITTEN.

A small sign on your counter with your restaurant's name on it. The guest touches it with their phone and your Google review page opens by itself — no app, no QR code, no searching for your business.

HOW IT WORKS

STEP 1

THEY TAP

The guest holds their phone over the sign while they pay. Works on every iPhone since the XR and on modern Android, with nothing to install.

STEP 2

YOUR PAGE OPENS

A link appears and opens your Google review box, already on your listing with the stars ready. Not a search, not a form of mine.

STEP 3

THEY WRITE IT THERE

Three seconds instead of two minutes — the whole difference between a review you get and one that never happens.

WHY IT PAYS FOR ITSELF

- Your best guests leave and never come back. In summer most of the room is visitors. The review they don't leave at the table is one you never get.
- Reviews decide who gets picked next. Rating and review count are what a visitor sees searching "dinner near me" from a hotel room.
- Nobody on your staff has to ask. The sign does it every table, every shift, with no awkward moment.

WHAT YOU GET

- A counter sign, 8 × 2 in, printed with your name in a clean acrylic stand — not a generic white card with a sticker on it.
- A second tap zone for Yelp, pointing at your Yelp business page.
- A slim card for the check presenter, so the ask lands when the guest is happiest.
- Set up for you: I find your listing, program it, print your name and test it before handing it over.
- Editable destination and a monthly tap count. If your listing changes I reprogram the same sign in seconds.

BUILT TO KEEP YOU OUT OF TROUBLE

The sign opens Google directly. No "how was your visit?" screen that sends only happy guests through — that is review gating, banned by Google and by the FTC since 2024. No incentives for a review. And the Yelp side points at your Yelp business page, never its review form, because Yelp penalizes businesses whose customers get asked. Others in this space sell those shortcuts; the penalty lands on your listing, not theirs.
